

Independent Candidate for Delegate to Congress.

King S. Woolsey.

Election November 5, 1878.

We are pleased to note the appointment of John E. Anderson, of Prescott, to the position of deputy United States Marshal. We have known Mr. Anderson since his arrival in the Territory and can say that it is an appointment that will do honor to the office.

A number of narrow minded people in this valley are opposed to having more land brought under cultivation for the reason that they think the grain market would be gutted. The demand will never be less than at present, but will rapidly increase, until in a very few years other sources will have to be found to help supply the demand.

Every owner of a piece of land should not let the season pass without planting trees and shrubs. Water is plenty and the extra labor required would be the largest item of cost. Every dollar thus invested would increase the value of the property many fold. Ornament and beautify your homes and make them pleasant and happy places of abode.

The catappa tree is recommended for cultivation. It has a handsome form and foliage, grows rapidly, is hardy, is not attacked by any insects, is very durable in either wet or dry situations, is of hard texture, good color, handsome, fine grain, and large growth, reaching a height of fifty feet, and a diameter of three feet in the trunk. When in bloom it said to have a very beautiful appearance.

The Sentinel conclusively proves that John G. Campbell ordered, paid for, and had shipped in his name the $3,000 job office that will soon be attached to the Enterprise office. Mr. Tyng also states that he has the following letter in his possession, written in Prescott by a friend of Campbell:

"If the Sentinel will work for Campbell it can make some money, otherwise he will spend his money on Mr. Purdy's paper."

All of which goes to show where some of that "small fortune that has been accumulated in the past thirteen years" is going to.

Stage robberies are becoming alarmingly frequent, and the traveling public extremely anxious for themselves and their property. Something severe and desperate must be done. A larger sum of money should be placed at the disposal of the Governor by the next Legislature. A law should also be passed making highway robbery a criminal offense with penalty of hanging. Let our leading citizens and public officials give earnest thought to this subject. It ought to be made a condition to support for candidates that they will, if elected vote for such a law.

The Democratic Convention last Monday endorsed the claims of King S. Woolsey for Congress. This endorsement, together with that of the Non-Partisans, who meet to-day, is equivalent to three-fourths of the vote of Maricopa county. It has been the game of a few of his enemies to claim that he will not carry his own county hoping thereby to hurt him in other sections of the Territory. He will not only receive nine-tenths of the vote of his own county but will beat Campbell in Yavapai county and crowd Hiram very close in Pima. The other candidate is so little known that he is practically out of the race.

The past season has been anything but a prosperous one to the farmers of Southern California. The trouble has been that too much attention has been paid to barley and wheat raising to the neglect of other products, and rust getting in that only makes it all the more severely felt. This same trouble will certainly be experienced by the farmers of Salt River valley in the near future unless a change is made. While our grain now finds a ready market and at good prices, as large profits can be made in many other things in the agricultural field. The most money does not always come from the most popular crops. Plant potatoes, beans, beets or almost any kind of vegetable or fruit. Potatoes are scarce, with a good demand, even in Phenix, the center of an agricultural section embracing thousands of acres. No trouble is found in disposing of them at ten cents a pound. From a California paper we learn that a farmer in the southern portion of that State planted four acres to beets which furnished sufficient food to fatten one hundred hogs. Good returns are to be obtained from all the vegetables and fruit raised here. Those farmers are the most successful who diversify their crops and do not solely rely on their grain production.

Phenix and Vicinity.

A late number of the San Francisco Bulletin contains the following correspondence:

PHENIX, August 5, 1878.

There is not a great deal to be seen on the road from Gillett to Phenix, as we leave the mines and branch out into New River and Salt River Valleys. The mountain ranges become bleak and bare, while on the valleys the cactus, mesquite and jackass rails are predominant. Feed, as a rule, is scarce, but the soil is good, and during a wet season grass is plenty. There are but few habitations, only those of stations, on this road, until the irrigating canals are reached, then the whole country changes from a desert to gardens, farms and orchards.

SALT RIVER VALLEY.

This valley is one of the largest and most productive in the Territory. It is devoted almost exclusively to agriculture and stock raising. Wheat, barley and corn are the principal crops raised, and are usually good. The average yield of wheat and barley is from thirty to sixty bushels to the acre, and sell on the ground at from three to four cents. After wheat and barley have been harvested, corn is planted on the same soil, with ample time for it to mature. A great portion of the land in this valley is cultivated in this manner, with good results. Potatoes and all other vegetables grow well here. The farmers, who have been here for several years, have large orchards and gardens, the product of which finds a good market at handsome prices. Wheat and barley for nearly the whole Territory is raised here, and teams are leaving every day for some point loaded with them. There are thousands of acres not yet occupied, owing to not getting the land cleared up. The company are extending their work every year, thus bringing into market large tracts of farming land, capable of producing all kinds of fruit, nuts and cereals. The first ditch to take water from Salt River was in 1867, the moving spirit being J. W. Swilling, with a capital stock of only $400. At present there are six large ditches, one-half mile apart, and carrying an average of 7,000 inches of water. Each farm has a ditch on each side of its tract, with smaller ones intervening, so that you can flood it all. The land is of clayish nature, and holds the moisture well. Nearly all the ranches in this vicinity have cottonwood trees planted on the banks adding well to the property. There are some fine orchards and vineyards in good bearing conditions, the fruit of which sells at a remunerative price. The yield last year was good, but it is expected will be very large this season, as more care has been taken.

THE LARGEST LAND OWNER IS COLONEL WOOLSEY.

Who leases to men at cheap rates. The Salt River empties into the Gila at the Prince Valley, some 200 miles from Yuma and about 15 miles south-west of this place. It rises in the White mountains in the eastern portion of the Territory, and runs almost west. It varies in width according to the season, and at this time averages about 150 yards. Near here the water has a brackish taste, but not enough to spoil it for irrigation. About 50 miles from here the water is pure, but at that point a stream of salt water pours into it, thus rendering it unfit for drinking. [The correspondent is mistaken; no such stream enters Salt River. Enterprise Herald.] Along this stream one can see the remains of ditches dug ages and ages ago, probably by a race of people different from those of the Maricopa Indians, who now roam over it. Salt River never runs dry, but if these ditches are enlarged and more added it will surely tax its capacity. It has made this desert blossom in the rose, and in a few years it will compare favorably with Santa Clara of the Golden State.

THE TOWN OF PHENIX

Covers an area of a mile in length and one half in width. The buildings are principally adobe, lumber being scarce and high. There are several stores and saloons and a large number of residences. The town is laid out like Prescott, with a large plaza in the center. On each side of every street a stream of water runs constantly, brought from the main river by ditches. Along these ditches are planted the cottonwood and other ornamental trees.

The population numbers about 1,000, the majority of whom are Mexicans. Very little lawlessness is permitted, as the officers of the county are bold and fearless men. The greatest drawback is the excessive heat of June, July and August, the mercury seldom falling below 100 degrees. The nights are warm and sultry. At early twilight one will see women and children making their beds under trees, for during these months no one attempts to sleep in the house. The SALT RIVER HERALD is published in this town and has a good circulation. The people are a reading community for I learn that sixty copies of the Weekly Bulletin are delivered here, beside a great number of Eastern papers.

A Big Blow at Camp Mohave.

The Miner contains the following account of a hurricane that swept over Camp Mohave, August 17:

It commenced raining at 11 o'clock in the morning, followed by gusts of wind. At 11:30 a small cloud was seen coming from the southwest, and seemed to be bounding up and down like a rubber ball, and struck the Doctor's quarters, tearing off a portion of the roof, and badly frightening Dr. Clark. It also tore off a portion of the roofs of the Commissary, hospital, Quartermaster's office, doctor's quarters, bath house, laundry building and the carpenter shop was entirely demolished and the corral master was picked up by the storm and carried over five hundred feet across the parade ground. During the hurricane the air was filled with broken roofs, pieces of plank, timbers, etc., and a whole pane of glass could scarcely be found at the post. The damage will amount to between $30,000 and $40,000. As far as ascertained no lives have been lost, although it appears almost a miracle that such a terrific storm should pass through a military post, doing the damage that it did without the sacrifice of human life.
